

Sleep diary, one week

An Everyday Insight tool
mysleeptoolbox.com

Each morning, within an hour or so of getting up, fill in one column about the night that just ended. A rough guess is fine for every answer, so there's no need to watch the clock at night. The questions on the next page are optional.

Name _____	Week of _____
	DAY 1	DAY 2	DAY 3	DAY 4	DAY 5	DAY 6	DAY 7
The night ending The morning's date
When did you get into bed?
When did you start trying to fall asleep?
About how long did falling asleep take? Minutes. A rough guess is fine. Don't check the clock to measure it.
How many times did you wake up in the night, not counting the last time? Number of times
Altogether, how long were those wakings? Minutes. Add up the time from each waking. Don't count the time it took to fall asleep or the time after you woke up for the last time.
What time did you wake up for the last time?
When did you get up to start your day?
How would you rate your sleep? Very poor, poor, fair, good, or very good

Working out the numbers

Time in bed

From the time you got into bed to the time you got up to start your day.

Total sleep

Sleep began at the time you started trying to fall asleep, plus how long falling asleep took. Count from then to the time you woke up for the last time, and take away the time you were awake in the night. Time before you tried to sleep and after your last waking isn't sleep.

Sleep efficiency

Total sleep divided by time in bed, times 100. Working in minutes makes it easier. For example, 6 hours 40 minutes of sleep in 8 hours 45 minutes in bed is 400 divided by 525, or about 76%.

About yesterday The day before each night. Skip any you like.

Did you nap yesterday? If you did, about when it started and for how long
How many drinks with caffeine did you have? Coffee, tea, soda, or energy drinks, and when you had the last one
How many drinks with alcohol did you have? And when you had the last one Did you exercise? If you did, about when Did you use a phone, tablet, computer, or TV in the last hour before bed? Yes or no
Did you take anything to help you sleep? If you did, what it was. You can leave that blank.
Anything else about the night?
